Attic Insulation

Up to 40% of a home's heat loss and gain is through the attic. The proper amount of attic insulation can reduce heating and cooling costs up to 35%.

Air Sealing

Air sealing saves energy by stopping what is called the "chimney effect." Air that has been heated or cooled can be drawn into the attic by leaks at the ceiling created by electrical, plumbing, venting and lighting penetrations. This makes the house feel drafty and raises energy bills. We seal around all such penetrations.

ADDing It Up

■ The Old & The New

Homes built prior to 1977 had no insulation requirements. Homes built from 1977 to 1986 had a minimum requirement of R-19 insulation in the attic. Homes built from 1986 on, have a minimum requirement of R-30 insulation in the attic. In 2012 the state of California increased the minimum attic insulation required to R-38 for new construction.

■ Lower Energy Bills

Energy costs will continue to rise to pay for things like “green energy” and other associated costs to produce and supply energy. Up to 40% of the heat loss or gain in a house is through the attic. Adding R-38 insulation to the attic can reduce energy bills up to 35%.

■ Greater Indoor Comfort & A Healthier Environment

Adding insulation to the attic reduces air pollution, noise and makes the indoor environment more comfortable. With less energy usage and formaldehyde-free insulation we reduce the amount of pollution into our environment. That is good for all of us.

■ No Cost To You

No cost Attic Insulation & Attic Air Sealing (for qualified home owners) because of SCAQMD funding and rebates from your local utility company, which will be signed over to Add Insulation.
